"As of yesterday, June 27, there were over 100,000 people that have been tested during the month of June," Justice Minister Osmar Serraglio told a Senate committee. The government says 2,500 people are taking part in the Games. The World Anti-Doping Agency has been working with police to crack down on drug use at this year's Games. Athletes from more than 160 countries will compete in 12 sports, including track and field, swimming, gymnastics, cycling, soccer, and judo. The Rio de Janeiro Games began in August, and are scheduled to run through August 21. Brazil's former Olympic star Mariano Rivera is one of the athletes being tested by the government. The 45-year-old, who was part of the team that won gold in the 1996 Atlanta Games, is also suspended. He has also been tested. Automated measurement of spiral spline-based longitudinal measurements in the orbit. To develop an algorithm to automate the measurement of spiral spline-based longitudinal measurements in the orbit, and to test its accuracy. Two hundred lateral orbit images were measured using the anthropometric program 'Stereo Optical Co, Inc.' and then manually by a single observer. The anthropometric measurements were then checked using an automated measure-check program. The automated longitudinal measurement of the program compared to the observer's measurements f3e1b3768c
