Activar código de la versión(aprobado) A:
The same executable doesn't always run the same version of AutoCAD on a given computer, so you'd have to load the correct version from disk on each computer you want to use. If you want an installer that does this, it's called a "setup" executable, and if it's on your machine, it's in the directory that contains the executable. (Usually "C:\Program Files\AutoCAD") A simple way to make your own setup executable is to use a Python script to write a file containing the AutoCAD
