We recognize that the district court did not set a payment schedule for Royce's care. We, however, nevertheless conclude that the district court set a reasonable payment schedule for Royce's care. Both Michael's and Royce's testimony reflects that the long-term care facilities that offer round-the-clock care to residents who have Alzheimer's disease are not cheap. Michael testified that he believed he would be paying $200 a day to provide care for Royce, though he was not specific. The district court was aware of the high cost of long-term care for a person with Alzheimer's. The district court could have required Royce to pay for the long-term care facilities for as long as it could possibly be needed. This would have resulted in Royce paying a substantial sum of money. Because the district court was aware of the costs of long-term care for Alzheimer's sufferers, we conclude that the district court was under no obligation to require Royce to pay for the services of long-term care facilities. CONCLUSION The district court did not err in finding that Michael should be required to contribute to his son's long-term care expenses. The district court's order is affirmed. Affirmed. NOTES [1] Royce's request for relief includes Michael's appeal of the district court's denial of his motion for a new trial. However, Michael has not set forth an argument with respect to the denial of his motion for new trial. The only argument presented for relief is Michael's argument that the district court erred in ordering Michael to contribute to Royce's long-term care expenses. As the district court's order is affirmed, we need not address Michael's argument regarding the motion for new trial. [2] We recognize that our cases, such as Bartsch, have recognized that the contribution requirement may be modified to place only a portion of the obligation for a spouse to the other spouse. Note: This is a freeware version of the Ideal Body Weight Calculator Loads of little annoying bugs in the program. For example, if you upload an image that is a bit transparent or partially coloured, it crops it out to a black rectangle. It's not the most important thing but it's pretty annoying. If this won't be fixed, the program has no sense of value, it's just a bunch of different features piled one on top of the other. This is a new version of SlimmeCalculator.exe. It has been checked to run as a reliable software, but new viruses may exist. SlimmeCal
