BLOWFISH is a cryptographic hash function that takes a variable-length input of arbitrary length and produces a fixed-length message digest as output. It was created in 1998 by Ray L. Steele and Bruce Schneier. The main characteristics of BLOWFISH are: - it is considered provably secure; - it is computationally very fast; - it is very portable; - it can be integrated into programs. BLOWFISH algorithm is one of the most widely used of hash functions. Among BLOWFISH constructions, BLOWFISH-128/BLOWFISH-256 ($(B \setminus (B, B^2 \setminus), B^2) / BLOWFISH-256$) and BLOWFISH-192/BLOWFISH-256 ($(B \setminus (B, B^2 \setminus), B^2) / BLOWFISH-256$) are generally used. BLOWFISH-256 was chosen for the standard. BLOWFISH can produce messages of variable length, which makes it useful for new applications. The purpose of this project is to create a dictionary of hashes of alphabets (and punctuation) known by the creators of BLOWFISH, which are used in the BLOWFISH input string before creating the hash. This will allow you to quickly create BLOWFISH hash of any text by providing just the text to be hashed. We created the application to be useful not only for cryptography, but also for programming practice. This application is not just a work in progress - it's already a huge project. We suggest you read our "why" before downloading. Feature List: - Add list of texts to be hashed - Show list of hashes of previously added texts - To save the text to the clipboard, by default, add an option to copy the text to the clipboard. - Add list of alphabets - Add list of punctuations - Change Text to Hash and Hash to Text - Add Dictionary - Search Dictionary - Add and change Dictionary Names - Add and change 6a5afdab4c
