The purpose is to send the cookie'sessionid' to users when they are at '/'. A similar implementation is already used in /secur.sh. It doesn't work. If I replace '--sent--' with '--notsent--', the script works as expected. In the htaccess file there are two env variables, USER and PASS. They are set to myUser and myPassword, respectively. Should I use absolute paths or relative paths? #part 1: don't send'sessionid' cookie set USER=myUser set PASS=myPassword ## if the user is not authenticated, redirect to 'login' if ["${USER} == noauth"]; then redirect=yes else ## if the user is authenticated, send'sessionid' cookie if ["${USER}!= noauth"]; then if ["${PASS}!= myPassword"] ; then sessionid=--notsent-- fi echo -e "Set-Cookie: sessionid=$sessionid; path=/ " else echo -e "Set-Cookie: sessionid=; path=/ " fi fi A: I'm pretty sure the issue is with the quotes in echo -e "Set-Cookie: sessionid=--notsent--; path=/ ". The quotes around --notsent-- cause the command to be parsed as Set-Cookie: sessionid=--notsent--, when in fact you want to use the parameter to pass to the Set-Cookie. Double-quote is for literal strings, not for variable substitution. So change echo -e "Set-Cookie: sessionid=--notsent--; path=/ " to echo -e "Set-Cookie: sessionid=--notsent--; path=/ ". 1. Field

Albany police took "immediate action" on Dec. 20, 2016, after Apple called the office to say "he was in the area and if he saw a building on North Creek Drive, he was going to shoot up the building," according to a report from the Albany Police Department. Apple left his name and contact information with the police department. On March 3, 2017, Apple's comments were reported by Times Union legal reporter Mike Duryear to the state's Attorney General's Office, which issued a cease and desist order saying Apple could not threaten anyone. The order was formally signed by Attorney General Eric Schneiderman on March 16, 2017, according to an AG's Office official. Apple has not commented on the incident since the spring of 2017, nor has he responded to multiple requests for comment on the order. Now, a YouTube video, which appears to be Apple talking about his suspension on the comments section of The Democrat's website, appears to show Apple confirming the death threat. "I hit a tree
